The Emerging Markets Opportunity

Emerging markets are expected to grow faster than developed markets for the foreseeable future. The region is at an earlier stage of its economic development and has greater scope for economic growth primarily because it is starting from a lower base than the developed world. For the most part, the region has the right socio-political, economic and demographic characteristics to be able to close the gap.

There are a number of long-term structural growth trends unique to emerging markets. Many of these relate to the growth of the consuming class in the region, which is still at an early stage of its development. Most of these growth trends are only accessible by direct investment in the region by way of companies that are best positioned to take advantage of the region's long-term structural growth.

By identifying and investing in these companies and by holding their shares for a long time, investors can benefit from the compounding of their growth over many years on a favorable risk adjusted basis.

Investment Philosophy

The Alta Emerging Markets Equity philosophy believes:

- Sustained growth drives returns;
- Quality protects against the downside; and
- Valuation matters.

The investment philosophy is applied through a research-based, stock selection process. The process is designed to identify companies that have significant exposure to emerging market economies and build a concentrated portfolio with significantly better growth and quality characteristics than the emerging market average. Furthermore, each holding is attractively valued in relation to its long-term future earnings and cash flows.
